The city of Entridge is under siege. An ancient evil has returned to crush the human city into the very earth from which it sprang so many eons ago. Peace, reigning supreme for hundreds of years, has suddenly vanished amidst a flurry of daring raids and devastating attacks from all manner of beasts and monsters. But make no mistake, giants are the real evil behind the deadly attacks of gnaths, minotaurs, ogres and other creatures even deadlier than those of old wives' tales.

Good king Bradwick has tried in vain to rally the dwarves and elves to help repel the evil invading hoards as they had done centuries ago. The dwarves have retreated to the caves in an effort to avoid outside contact and the elves have all but disappeared from the occupied Realmz altogether.

King Bradwick's few remaining troops are barely able to protect the villages and towns in the immediate area, much less mount a full scale assault on the invaders. A far off outpost captained by the king's nephew Samuel Stillwater has not been heard from for many months and the king himself has declared the outpost lost to the forces of evil engulfing the kingdom.

The situation seems hopeless and a constant stream of refugees pour in from the outlying areas in an attempt to escape the terror and carnage. Alas, the fate of Entridge shall be no better unless something is done to bring the downfall of the mighty fortresses that house the invading giants.

Your task: Meet with king Bradwick and make your plans to Assault Giant Mountain, for to do otherwise spells certain doom for Entridge and possibly the entire human race.
